

REPORT EDITING ... convince your decision-makers

Today's corporate world would grind to a halt without reports. They're indispensable for planning and solving problems.

With all the research and hard work you've put into your latest report, you now deserve to have it add to your reputation by giving your decision-makers the clear, concise information they need.

The last thing you need are typos, language errors or poor formatting.

But being so familiar with it, it's easy to read what you expect to read, and so miss errors.

My editor's eye, combined with my preference for concise, plain language, will put the final gloss on your report.

Talking of plain language ...

Did you know this?

The EASIER a document is to read and understand, the more CREDIBLE AND PERSUASIVE it is.

So you need to be highly ethical about your claims and recommendations.
